HOW MUCH HEAT DO I NEED TO GENERATE?

Here is your step by step guide for working out how much heat you need.

- Area to be heated, length.....feet, width.....feet, average height.....feet
- Multiply, length x width x average height = volume.....cubic feet
- Select the description which best suits the area to be heated from the table below and fill in the appropriate Btu/cu.ft figure here.....
- Multiply the volume from B.....Cubic feet by the figure from C.....Btu/cu.ft = Total heat required.....Btu/hour

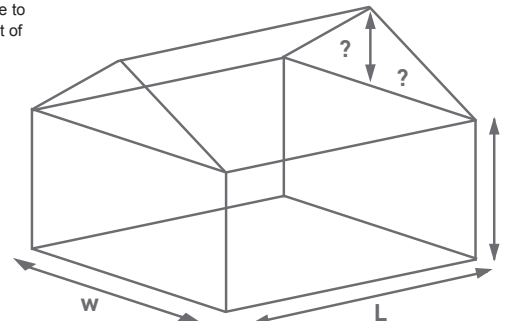

The amount of Btu/cu.ft required is dependent on the insulation of the building and the average ambient temperature prevailing in the area where the building is situated. A building with no insulation in the area that experiences extremely adverse weather conditions may require up to 9 Btu per cu.ft

For general calculation we recommend 5 Btu per cu.ft. * 1 cubic metre = 35 cubic feet

A comfortable working temperature is not only essential for people to work safely and productively it is a legal requirement. The amount of heat required to give comfortable working conditions depends on several factors, the most important are:

- The standard of insulation in your building
- How much warm air escapes through frequently opened doors
- The outside temperature
- 15 C / 59° F is a comfortable temperature for people who are moving about and so generating some body heat
- Calculations are based on a Delta T of 20° C, i.e. an ambient temperature of -5° C and a required temperature of +15° C

Which description best fits the building or area that you want to heat?

A	No insulation (e.g. corrugated sheet), doors frequently opened	9 Btu/cu.ft
B	Poor insulation (e.g. single skin brick/block), single glazed windows, opened fairly often	6,8 Btu/cu.ft
C	Average insulation (e.g. double skin brick/block), single glazed windows, roof insulated	5 Btu/cu.ft
D	Good insulation (e.g. blocks/cladding/insulation between), few or double-glazed windows	2,7 Btu/cu.ft

HEATER BOOSTERS

Boost the efficiency of your Heater by 40%. Just add a Heater Booster

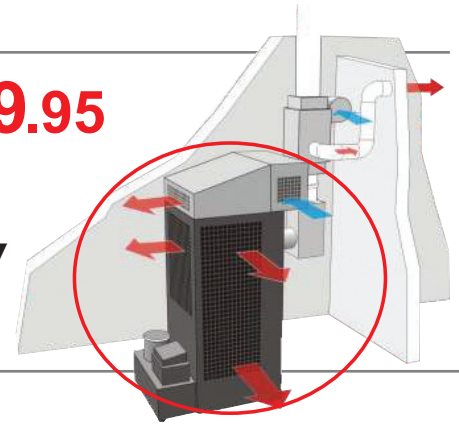

The heater booster is an in-line multipass stainless steel flue gas heat exchanger which can raise efficiency on HP heaters to over 90%. This means over 40% more heat is realised from your fuel that would otherwise be lost up the flue. A 220-240v supply is required for the fan. The booster simply slots onto any 150mm flue sector before the flue. The heat outlet can be ducted if required (see as illustrated).

Weekly software updates provide new OE level model calibration procedures.

Comprehensive coverage and guided procedures guarantee precise measurements without referring to a user manual.

Vehicles with ADAS systems can respond with passive warnings or take active measures where driving risks are sensed. After repairing a vehicle, all ADAS sensors & systems need to be re-calibrated, to enable correct operation.

Ravaglioli was founded in 1958; Italian manufacturer and world leader of workshop equipment. Since Ravaglioli started we have utilised our in-house resources to design and manufacture our equipment (mechanics, hardware and software) combining with many years of experience. And so, we keep our products up-to-date with the market changes and needs. We look after our products with high professionalism, our constant growth testifies this. We are proud to be 100% owners of our technology which is located within our four factories in Italy, where over 40 hardware and software R&D engineers care about their work and research and design, development, mechanics, electronic boards, writing of the necessary software's for all the controls. Possibly the largest manufacturing (company owned) factory in Europe providing a 360-degree production facility that is all totally in house.

KPS306HEK

2-post mechanical lift with a base frame – some Features Capacity 3200 kg

Our equipment is manufactured in Europe using high quality engineering at our Italian factory's.

ONLY
£2,995

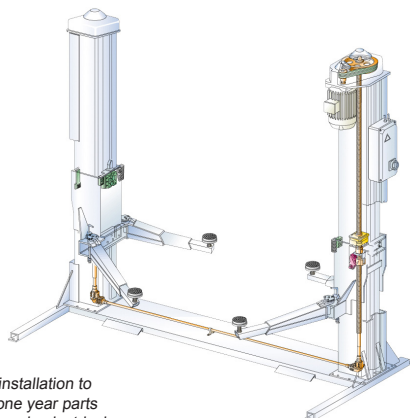

Weekly from: £15.90†

Shaft transmission requiring no maintenance, unlike the chain driven base frame lifts that require maintenance to chain & switches with frequent adjustments. Two conic gear-boxes are adjustment free. The main nut is bronze (not plastic) so offers high resistance to wear giving greater safety.

Automatic and permanent nut lubrication of the nut and screw using pots of oil above the nuts, this ensures lubrication of the nut before it turns through the screw. Oil is better than grease (other manufacturers use) for lubrication of the screw and nuts.

Steel high resistance rolled screw provides longer life. The solid base frame (self-supporting) is exceptional as a solution to poor floors offering minimum concrete floor thicknesses and poor surface anchorage etc. The columns are constructed in steel being designed to be sturdy and strong. Three stage arms provide asymmetric lifting of off road and large vehicles so to easily open the doors.

Accessories are available using our K system quick drop in adapters or extension pads. Available in 3-phase electrical supply as it's a mechanical lift.

*Price includes delivery to site with access, installation to a prepared site as normal. Also includes a one year parts and labour warranty, excluding any building work, electrical connections, accidental damage or miss use, floods etc.
